

The Knoxville Whig.

BROWNLOW & HAWES, Publishers.

Former host that standard shed,
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With Freedom's banner streaming over us,
And Freedom's banner streaming over us.

Knoxville, Tenn., November 20, 1867.

Hon. D. T. Patterson, U. S. S.

This distinguished gentleman, whose name heads this article, has been for some time the object of vituperation and abuse by all the party-leaders of the Democratic press of the State, but their futile attempts to defame and injure his reputation have only served to make him more popular. He has been given a fair trial by the people, and the result is a verdict in his favor. He is a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He is a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He is a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

Patterson, Brownlow as Senator, who marked the contrast, how pregnant with untold misery to the people and country at large. Good men are put aside to make room for those who possess neither the disposition nor ability to do right. Truly we have fallen upon evil times.

The above remarks literary production we take from the Free Press of this city. As a specimen of the kind of journalism which is being produced in this city, it is a fair specimen of the kind of journalism which is being produced in this city.

At Washington he has had no influence whatever in the Senate or out of it, even with his own party, except that accruing to him from his relationship to the President.

Direct Andrew Johnson of the patronage of the Executive office and Judge Patterson would amount to more than a wooden man. Before there was a railroad in East Tennessee, when eggs were three cents per dozen and butter five cents per pound, the "upright and able Senator" and "statesman" did not realize enough from the practice of the law to pay his board bills.

Without doubt, the question of his superior qualifications to Brownlow, we pronounce the coupling of the names of Hugh L. White, Felix Grundy and John Bell with that of Dave Patterson as a decidedly rich "goat." Mr. Press and Tuten, what do you think of it?

We publish the article of the Free Press for the amusement of our Tennessee readers. There is nothing in the Cumbe Almanac or "Phanny Phelaw" to equal it.

Rebel Methodist Conference.

We publish a communication from Rev. W. H. Bates, of the Southern wing of the M. E. Church, in reply to one which appeared in this paper several weeks since from Rev. Dr. Pearne, of the loyal branch of this Church.

In publishing Mr. Bates' communication, we extend to him a courtesy which the Conservative papers have refused to extend to that of Mr. Bates, whose sympathies are and have always been with the Federal Government in its war for the suppression of treason.

Dr. Pearne is able to meet with the pen or in debate all the enemies of his Church in East Tennessee, and we would not offer a word of comment in presenting Mr. Bates' letter but for his gratuitous thrust at the Union League.

All the cant about "negro equality" cannot extenuate from the charge of defeat and persistent treason the Conference which Mr. Bates essays to defend. We have heretofore noticed, somewhat in detail, the proceedings of this disloyal convocation of ministers which recently assembled at Cleveland as a Conference of "non-political" messengers of "Christ and his crucified." We will not repeat what we have heretofore written, but give a few facts in relation to the "non-political" Church, as follows by the name of Bedford, who was a rebel soldier, said in a speech on the floor of the Conference that "he knew what it was to be a traitor, and he was in the principles for which he was placed there, and was willing to die by them."

Another said "the M. E. Church was transient; like greenbacks it would play out." Dr. Sehon, (the same whom Andrew Johnson slapped in prison, for treason), the Secretary of the Conference, said in a stirring light of the Church "who ministered alone preach Christ and his crucified," who "carried the evidence of his loyalty in his pocket and boasted that he had taken public board at Nashville. The presiding Bishop, Waightman, of South Carolina, exhibited a bad spirit. He spoke in bitter, scornful terms of the old Church, and said in this speaking that "it (the M. E. Church) had been the back-bone of the Federal Government during the war."

Whether this is true or not, Abraham Lincoln said that the loyal Methodists of the North, because of their superiority of numbers, had furnished more soldiers and done more for the suppression of the rebellion than any other denomination of Christians. It does not, however, become the Bishop of a Conference claiming to be "non-political" to urge as a crime against the M. E. Church that it was loyal during the war.

We could give the declarations of many others of the ministers of this Conference, similar to those cited above, showing the treasonable character of this so-called "non-political" Church, but have not the space to do so.

With such a record Mr. Bates will find it an easy business to prejudice the loyal people of East Tennessee against the loyal Methodist Church by crying "negro equality" and accusing the loyal League, which numbers among its members a vast majority of all the voters of East Tennessee, with rebel disaffection.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

Gen. L. S. Trowbridge.

The Free Press, of this city, most violently personal attack on our fellow-citizen, Gen. Trowbridge, in its issue of the 10th inst., is the bridge. The protest (not one) of the attack, is the bridge. The protest (not one) of the attack, is the bridge. The protest (not one) of the attack, is the bridge.

Now, if there is anything wrong in this transaction, Gen. Trowbridge is responsible. What Gen. Trowbridge charged the State was in accordance with the views of the Governor as to what constituted an equitable fee; and it was no more than he should have received to abandon his clients and go to Washington at the enormous expense incident to such a trip, and boarding at Washington hotels. We know that before leaving home the General spent days in fortifying himself with documents and laboring for the interests of these roads, for which he charged no compensation.

The editor of the Free Press is a lawyer, and we understand, received a $500 fee for going to Washington to request the President to release the release of the State, but their futile attempts to defame and injure his reputation have only served to make him more popular. He has been given a fair trial by the people, and the result is a verdict in his favor.

In proportion to the large performed and the success attending the same, this was fully as much as Gen. Trowbridge received for his services. We have no idea Lawyer Fleming, of the Free Press, received more than his services merited, for he has too much sympathy with the devotees of the "non-political" cause to exert an exorbitant fee for just out of the brothers of the Conservative party just out of the Rebel army and incarcerated in a Yankee battle. Again, Gen. Trowbridge has as much business in Tennessee as he has in any other State. He is a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

Patterson, Brownlow as Senator, who marked the contrast, how pregnant with untold misery to the people and country at large. Good men are put aside to make room for those who possess neither the disposition nor ability to do right. Truly we have fallen upon evil times.

The above remarks literary production we take from the Free Press of this city. As a specimen of the kind of journalism which is being produced in this city, it is a fair specimen of the kind of journalism which is being produced in this city.

At Washington he has had no influence whatever in the Senate or out of it, even with his own party, except that accruing to him from his relationship to the President.

Direct Andrew Johnson of the patronage of the Executive office and Judge Patterson would amount to more than a wooden man. Before there was a railroad in East Tennessee, when eggs were three cents per dozen and butter five cents per pound, the "upright and able Senator" and "statesman" did not realize enough from the practice of the law to pay his board bills.

Without doubt, the question of his superior qualifications to Brownlow, we pronounce the coupling of the names of Hugh L. White, Felix Grundy and John Bell with that of Dave Patterson as a decidedly rich "goat." Mr. Press and Tuten, what do you think of it?

We publish the article of the Free Press for the amusement of our Tennessee readers. There is nothing in the Cumbe Almanac or "Phanny Phelaw" to equal it.

Rebel Methodist Conference.

We publish a communication from Rev. W. H. Bates, of the Southern wing of the M. E. Church, in reply to one which appeared in this paper several weeks since from Rev. Dr. Pearne, of the loyal branch of this Church.

In publishing Mr. Bates' communication, we extend to him a courtesy which the Conservative papers have refused to extend to that of Mr. Bates, whose sympathies are and have always been with the Federal Government in its war for the suppression of treason.

Dr. Pearne is able to meet with the pen or in debate all the enemies of his Church in East Tennessee, and we would not offer a word of comment in presenting Mr. Bates' letter but for his gratuitous thrust at the Union League.

All the cant about "negro equality" cannot extenuate from the charge of defeat and persistent treason the Conference which Mr. Bates essays to defend. We have heretofore noticed, somewhat in detail, the proceedings of this disloyal convocation of ministers which recently assembled at Cleveland as a Conference of "non-political" messengers of "Christ and his crucified." We will not repeat what we have heretofore written, but give a few facts in relation to the "non-political" Church, as follows by the name of Bedford, who was a rebel soldier, said in a speech on the floor of the Conference that "he knew what it was to be a traitor, and he was in the principles for which he was placed there, and was willing to die by them."

Another said "the M. E. Church was transient; like greenbacks it would play out." Dr. Sehon, (the same whom Andrew Johnson slapped in prison, for treason), the Secretary of the Conference, said in a stirring light of the Church "who ministered alone preach Christ and his crucified," who "carried the evidence of his loyalty in his pocket and boasted that he had taken public board at Nashville. The presiding Bishop, Waightman, of South Carolina, exhibited a bad spirit. He spoke in bitter, scornful terms of the old Church, and said in this speaking that "it (the M. E. Church) had been the back-bone of the Federal Government during the war."

Whether this is true or not, Abraham Lincoln said that the loyal Methodists of the North, because of their superiority of numbers, had furnished more soldiers and done more for the suppression of the rebellion than any other denomination of Christians. It does not, however, become the Bishop of a Conference claiming to be "non-political" to urge as a crime against the M. E. Church that it was loyal during the war.

We could give the declarations of many others of the ministers of this Conference, similar to those cited above, showing the treasonable character of this so-called "non-political" Church, but have not the space to do so.

With such a record Mr. Bates will find it an easy business to prejudice the loyal people of East Tennessee against the loyal Methodist Church by crying "negro equality" and accusing the loyal League, which numbers among its members a vast majority of all the voters of East Tennessee, with rebel disaffection.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

We do not believe that a respectable number of the white and colored people of any section of the State are opposed to the action of the Southern Baptist Convention, which is a body of men who are as much opposed to the proposed change as we are.

At the recent meeting of the State Teachers Association, a resolution was adopted to "devotedly support the Union League." The resolution, we are glad to know, was voted down, and had it been adopted by the Association we would have hoped that the Legislature would have taken the change proposed.

Poor Andrew.

The Democratic-Conservative papers tell us that the President is very angry because the Democratic State Convention of New York refused to endorse his administration. Just what the President might have expected. With the treasury of John Tyler and the fate of like traitors before him, he should have known the danger awaiting his base betrayal of the Union party.

What have the traitors, the Democrats, despise the traitor Johnson. When the brief hour of power remaining to him is gone, and he has no more offices to bestow, or people's money to sustain rebel papers in East Tennessee, there will be none—even by lip service—so poor as to do him reverence.

Disappointed in his ambition to be re-elected President, despised alike by Democrats and Republicans, in a minority in his own village, county, Congressional district and State, A. Johnson will out of office the most unhappy and at the same time contemptible person who ever disgraced an exalted station.

New York Election.

As a result of the New York election, the Democratic papers are publishing that a Democratic U. S. Senator will be elected to succeed Gov. Morgan, one of the Radical incumbents. This is not true. The election for United States Senator cannot be held till February, 1869, and then the Legislature to be elected may be Radical. After the Presidential election, the Democrats will not sweep the State, and the election to be held will sweep the State by a large majority. The Superintendent of Public Instruction and the Police Commissioners are the only offices of any importance to be filled by the present Democratic Legislature. The Governor, who is a Radical, was elected two years ago for four years, and he fills the important offices of Auditor of the Canals, a Superintendent of the Bank Department, a Superintendent of the Insurance Department, and a Superintendent of the State Prison. So far as patronage is concerned, the election in New York is a barren victory to the Copperheads.

The Franchise Law.

The excellent Representative from our neighboring county, Anderson and Campbell, Hon. James A. Doughty, made an able speech on the 12th inst. in favor of the repeal of the odious Sixteenth Section of the Franchise Law. We don't believe any party doubts the sincerity of Col. Doughty in his course on the great question of the colored man's political position. The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

He had not expected that the subject would be brought up to day, and was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

But he did not omit to raise his voice in favor of the reconsideration of the postponement of the bill, and in favor of its immediate passage. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it. He was not prepared to say all he could say in regard to it.

The original and many other of our fellow citizens call him a fanatic. Col. D. has been too consistent on this question, running through a period of twenty-five years, and since early manhood and amid great persecution, to be doubted as the sincere, earnest friend of the oppressed. Below we give a brief synopsis of Col. Doughty's speech:

Judge Totten presented a portrait of the character of Judge Green, which, in our opinion, was his own. Judge Green, a faithful representation of his own character, was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country. He was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.

Judge Totten presented a portrait of the character of Judge Green, which, in our opinion, was his own. Judge Green, a faithful representation of his own character, was a man of deep religious convictions, and with the returning sense of the country, he is the whole country.